Dear State Representative Dixon,

I'm writing to urge you (Gov.-elect Little and IDOC Director Atencio) to appeal the Edmo decision. (I am also copying my state senator and representative on this message.)

Not only are sex-change operations exorbitantly expensive -- both for the surgery and a lifetime of follow-up care -- but they are also recognized as ineffective in dealing with gender dysphoria.

Idaho should stand against any attempt by a federal judge to force taxpayers to fund expensive and experimental surgeries for inmates. This judge's ruling demonstrates a lack of true compassion for those struggling with gender dysphoria and a lack of respect for the values of Idaho taxpayers.

Thank you for your service.

Sincerely,

Statesmen Academy Summary.pdf

Rep. Dixon,

Greetings from Colorado!

On behalf of FPF President Paul Weber, I'd like to invite you to apply to attend the next session of the Statesmen Academy which will take place July 24-28, 2017, on the campus of Focus on the Family in Colorado Springs. The 2017 Statesmen Academy will be composed of an exclusive group of hand-selected Christian legislators from around the nation – top-notch legislators who are developing leaders. The classes will be taught by experienced Christian legislative leaders, both from the state and federal level. For more on what the academy is all about, please see the summary that I've attached.

If you are selected, we will be pleased to pay all of your costs including airfare, and if you are able to bring your wife, we can pay all of her onsite costs as well, although not her air travel. The application is relatively short, and you may get that process started by clicking the link below. Please note that the link is not itself the application. The application form will be sent by email and is brief.

Rep. Dixon, I hope you'll take a moment to click the link below and start the process. If selected as part of the 2017 class, you'll meet wonderful legislators from across the country as well as top pro-family leaders from nearly 40 states, since our annual Family Policy Council conference is held concurrently with the Statesmen Academy.

If you have any questions at all, please call me via my cellphone: 719-963-2770.

I hope to hear from you!

John

I think so. His faith has grown stronger over the past two years, and he is attending the prayer meetings we hold here, so I believe he would benefit from it.

Two Flags What They Represent

Two Flags: What They Represent – and What Big Business Needs to Hear

Two flags have dominated this month. Two flags with very different messages.

As always, June 14 is Flag Day. And the Stars and Stripes are already being seen in abundance in advance of Independence Day.

But if you're like me, you may have noticed the rainbow flag even more this month. If you live in a major metropolitan area, you may have spotted activists sporting rainbow apparel – or carrying rainbow flags or banners as a parade marches past.

But almost regardless of where you live, you've probably seen businesses displaying a rainbow flag in their store or online. Several major companies even incorporate the rainbow flag into their logo for the month of June.

They would say, if pressed, that they are simply supporting “equality for all.”

But we already have a flag for that – the one that hundreds of thousands of American soldiers have died to defend. The pledge to that flag underscores the “liberty and justice for all” afforded to every American.

The corporate marketers – who think they are being hip and inclusive by wrapping their company in the gay pride flag – need to know the message that they are sending to lots of perceptive Americans.

Here’s what I and millions of other potential customers see when we see the rainbow flag:

- The rainbow flag represents attacks on the religious freedom of people all over the United States.
- It represents a movement that seeks to force its viewpoint on all Americans, regardless of their deeply held religious convictions. It would – and has – forced Americans to pay heavy fines and to give up their businesses simply for declining to celebrate messages that violate their conscience.
- It represents an attack on the privacy and safety of women and children. Laws to implement the LGBT agenda are being used, as intended, to allow biological men into showers, locker rooms and bathrooms.
- It represents an attack on the rights of women – especially girls who are increasingly being crowded out of athletic competitions by biological boys who claim to be female.
- It represents a social experiment that attempts to push its way into our Armed Forces – at the expense of military readiness.
- It represents a movement that is relentlessly targeting our kids – from Drag Queen Story Hour to the nationwide projects to “queer the classroom.”
- It even represents an intrusion into the sanctuaries of churches themselves, as my colleague Brittany Jones wrote about recently.

If you see similar things when you see the rainbow flag, please pass this along to others. And use this list – or make your own – to politely share with businesses that need to hear.

If corporations better understood that this is the message that many of their customers see, maybe more of them would ditch the rainbow flag and get back to the one flag that truly represents freedom.

Sincerely,

John Paulton
